Congratulations Fall 2008 Campus Grant Winners

“Me, Too” Monologues
Priyanka Chaurasia
This performance about race and culture written and executed by members of the Duke community seeks to discuss issues of race beyond a didactic setting.

The Ethics of Health Care Liberalization in Turkey for Women
Liqiao Ma
This research project investigates the ethical dilemmas that arise due to the current westernization of Turkey’s healthcare system, with a focus on the ethical conflicts between liberalized healthcare for women and Islamic religious traditions and between healthcare westernization and cultural autonomy.

Can We Talk? A Conversation with Eleanor Clift about Legal and Ethical Issues in End-of-Life Care
Richard Payne – Duke Institute on Care at the End of Life
The Duke Institute on Care at the End of Life (ICEOL) will bring political commentator Eleanor Clift to Duke to catalyze conversation and action about legal and ethical implications of end-of-life care. The event inaugurates a proposed annual speakers' series.

Dialogues on Race Relations (DORRs)
Lucas Lallinger – The Center for Race Relations
Dialogues on Race Relations (DORRs) is a program within the Center for Race Relations that facilitates discussion on campus regarding issues of race, gender, and sexuality by creating a safe environment to conduct emotionally charged and intimate conversations. The 2008-09 dialogues include “Sisters Beneath the Skin” and “Marriage in the Gothic Wonderland.”

Encompass: Mapping Ethics Today
Melissa Wiesner
Encompass is a magazine for students by students that will discuss ethical issues, such as the financial crisis, the hook-up culture, copyright law, or green energy, in a manageable and appealing form that is open to all disciplines.